Senior Year—

you did it! You have made it to that pivotal time, when the steps you take now matter more than ever toward achieving your goals. The Princeton Review's step-by-step timeline will walk you through the when, what and how of senior year so you can be confident that you are doing all the right things at the right time for your future.

Senior Year Checklist

Think about what you want in your prospective college.

Talk to your counselors and find out what tools your high school has for researching your best options. We offer resources to help you, such as the books The Best 380 Colleges and Colleges that Pay You Back, and our interactive college search on PrincetonReview.com

Sign up for the RSAT®/ACT® and SAT Subject Tests™.

If you're thinking of applying for early decision acceptance and you're not happy with your previous scores, you should take the October RSAT and/or ACT. To take a practice RSAT or ACT, book at <http://www.princetonreviewhk.com/contact.html>

Write your college application essay.

Have a good time with the essay. Avoid formulas. Don't be afraid to demonstrate your individuality. And proofread once, twice, three times before sending. If you need help, our tutors are available every step of the way.

Ask for recommendations.

Most colleges require that you get letters of recommendation from teachers or other adults in your life. Ask for letters early and provide your resume with all of your accomplishments. Don't forget instructions on where to send the recommendation.

Apply for early decision acceptance.

If you're confident that you have found your dream school, consider applying early decision or early action. You'll know where you'll be next year and can breathe a deep sigh of relief by mid-December. Of course, with early decision acceptance comes commitment to that school. (Early action applications aren't as strict, but fewer colleges offer this option.)

Apply to your top-choice schools.

Many schools use the common app, which you can fill out and submit online. Or you can print it out and submit by snail mail.

Don't put rolling admissions on the back burner.

Some colleges admit applicants on a continuous basis. At these schools, the earlier you apply, the more spaces there are available.

Schedule interviews at your chosen schools.

Though interviews are optional, they're a good opportunity to have additional discussions with your selected school(s). The earlier you can schedule your interviews, the better.

Senior Year Checklist

Sort out your Financial Aid on FAFSA (U.S. Students)

You can find and fill out this form online at FAFSA.ed.gov. Go to the Financial Center at PrincetonReview.com/CollegeFinance to learn how to complete this form and maximize your funding.

Keep on deadline.

Candidates can ruin their chances for admission by sending materials in late. Let your recommenders know your deadlines and make sure you've given your counselor everything he or she needs to send along with your transcripts.

On the waiting list? Don't give up hope.

Let the college know immediately that you're still excited and ready to attend. Send updated grades and activities to boost your chances.

You're accepted—what now?

Compare aid packages. If you need help, check out PrincetonReview.com/CollegeFinance. Be sure to let the colleges know right away of any changes to your family's income, such as a parent making a job or career change—it could affect your aid package. Return your signed acceptance letter and student/parent loan applications to your college. You'll also probably need to place a deposit now. Don't forget to thank the people who recommended you and tell them where you'll be attending.

Tip for Seniors

Don't let your grades slip. Colleges will be keeping an eye on your GPA even after you've been accepted.

Answers to Your FAQs

When is my last chance to take the ACT or RSAT?

Fall of your senior year is your last chance to get scores before college applications are due.

When are my college applications due?

Early decision and early action are usually due in November. Regular applications are usually due January 1. Deadlines might vary by school, so make sure you check your top college picks' websites.

Will my ACT/RSAT scores automatically be sent to colleges?

This one is a little more complicated than just yes or no. When you register for the test, you have the option to pick schools and have your scores sent to them automatically. If you don't select schools during registration, you can send your scores for a fee after you've seen your results.

For the ACT, you pick which test dates' scores you want to send. For the RSAT, colleges will see all of your scores unless you use ScoreChoice™, which lets you pick which test dates' scores to send.

What else do I need to do?

Visit the colleges you're interested in and make the most of your senior year, but don't get senioritis. Colleges keep an eye on your grades and activities even after you're accepted.

How can The Princeton Review help you right now?

Our ACT and RSAT prep courses and private tutors will help you get ready for the exam by teaching you the content and strategies you need. But our expertise doesn't end there. If you need help maintaining your grades, our academic tutors are here for you:

Tip for Seniors

Trying to decide how many schools to apply to? There's no hard and fast rule, but we recommend 5 to 8 schools. Make sure you include a mix of safety, match and reach schools.
